A Holistic Perspective on the Future of Admissions: Ms. Sondhi's Invaluable Takeaways from IACAC Regional Sessions

With Admission Officers from Across the Globe

With Independent as well as School Counsellors

Ms. Niharika Sondhi recently had an enriching experience at the IACAC 2024 South and Central Asia Regional Institute organized at The Shri Ram School, Gurugram.

One of the most notable sessions, "Mock Admissions with a Twist", allowed participants to evaluate candidates' prospects through various case studies. The lively atmosphere created by Lorenzo Wilcox from the University of Oregon, Megan Mankerian-Stem from Creighton University, Sujith Sajan from Loyola University Chicago, and Craig VanGalder from Butler University made for insightful discussions.

Another highlight was the "Admissions Unplugged" session with Shane McGuire from Vanderbilt and Allison Duke from Dartmouth. Ms. Sondhi found their insights enlightening as they discussed trends in U.S. higher education admissions for 2025, including standardized testing and the emerging role of AI. Their discussions addressed many of her questions about AI's potential as a revolutionary tool for students and advisors.

Additionally, the session on "Demonstrating Interest or Engagement?" led by Anna-Theresa Wise from Hamilton College, Grace Robertson-Lloyd from University of Southern California, and Carly Hernandez from Middlebury College, provided Ms. Sondhi with valuable strategies for helping students make a lasting impression on their choice of colleges.

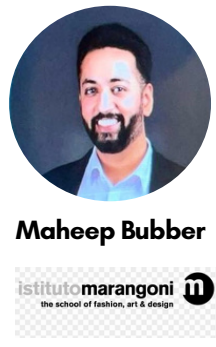

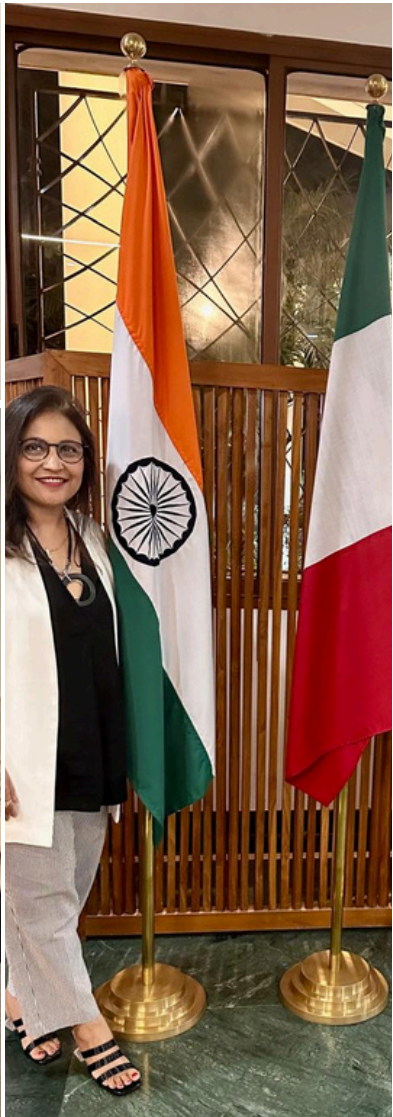

There was a talk as well by Career Educator, Dr. Jeffrey Neill on "AI in Admissions" which provided Ms. Sondhi with new strategies to enhance her college advising practices, showcasing how AI can benefit students and shape the future of admissions.

A session on "Stress and Procrastination", led by Arshita Kapoor of The British School, Shikha Vij of Step By Step School, Tanushree Bhattacharya from the University of British Columbia, and Alexandra Salcedo of Boston University, turned out to be incredibly thought-provoking. This session offered practical strategies to help students manage stress offering Ms. Sondhi tips on supporting her students better, through the college application process.

The IACAC event at Shriram had a wonderfully intimate atmosphere. It was well-organized, showcasing cultural performances that included traditional Indian activities such as Mehndi application, bangle making, and pottery.

Overall, the conference was extremely enlightening and provided an excellent opportunity for Ms. Sondhi to connect with admission officers and counselors from India and across the globe. With over 22 years of experience in independent counseling, she has always emphasized the importance of continuous learning, and noted that the event delivered invaluable insights that would enhance her effectiveness as a counselor, ultimately benefiting her students in the college admissions journey.

Bridging Design and Academia: Key Moments from Ms. Sondhi's Visit to the Italian Embassy Cultural Centre

With Ms. Barbara Prevosti of Bocconi University, Milan

With Mr. Antonio Bartoli, Italian Ambassador to India

At the Italian Embassy Cultural Centre

It was a wonderfully warm evening for Ms. Sondhi as she was invited to the Italian Embassy Cultural Centre, where she had the pleasure of meeting Italian Ambassador Antonio Bartoli. His insights on Italy's design heritage and its impact on technology and architecture deeply inspired her. The ambassador also commended the Indian community in Europe for its proactive approach and impressive critical thinking abilities, highlighting their contributions. This recognition marked a particularly proud moment for Ms. Sondhi.

Another highlight was her conversation with Barbara Prevosti from Bocconi University. Ms. Sondhi learned about the exceptional opportunities for Indian students at Milan, including such facilities as world-class faculty, an innovative and cutting-edge curriculum, and a vibrant campus life with international exposure.

Ms. Sondhi also had the opportunity to connect with other university representatives, such as Arianna Malavasi from Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, Maheep Bubber from Marangoni University, Alberto Parravicini from IULM University, and Dr. Rajendra Kumar from Politecnico di Milano, as well as some alumni like Medha Pandey and Kanishk Sehgal.

Students who come to EdNet have the unique advantage of benefitting from Ms. Sondhi's extensive knowledge of studying in Milan, whether for design or non-design courses. Her tailored guidance helps students explore a range of programs and institutions, ensuring they choose paths that fit their aspirations. With her strong industry connections and expertise in various disciplines, Ms. Sondhi is well-equipped to guide students to succeed in Milan's educational environment.
